Getting Your Bible Off of Your Shelf and Into Your Life:

Stars to Guide Your Journey

For many people, trying to study the Bible is like being lost at sea with no sense of direction and little hope of reaching a destination. Sunday morning, as we return to our study of how to put the Bible to work in your life, we will learn to navigate by the stars, using a few powerful principles to guide us through the scriptures with a sense of direction and purpose. Join us Sunday as we learn to get our Bibles off of the shelf and into our lives.

On November 9, 2002, John Sheppard celebrated his 56th birthday. Four days later, on Nov. 13, his wife of 33 years, Kathy received a phone call telling her that he had suddenly died of a heart attack. She describes her journey as "going through grief in search of life after death for the living." Her uplifting story has been published in a book titled, "I Lost My Husband, Not My Mind." Kathy Simpson Sheppard was born in Boston, Massachusetts. She is presently living in Greenville where she and John, her husband, spent most of their married life.
